FUND LETTER MAY 2026

In May, the Pentagon High Conviction Bond Fund (the "Fund") increased by 0.69%, versus a return of 0.53% for the ICE BofA Global High Yield USD Hedged Index. The ICE BofA Global High Yield USD Hedged Index is a market-value-weighted benchmark composed of below-investment-grade corporate bonds issued in major developed-market currencies and hedged into USD.

Year-to-date, the Fund has returned 0.34%, compared to 2.03% for the ICE BofA Global High Yield USD Hedged Index.

Since its inception, the Fund has returned 188.8% in total, or 8.28% annually, which is way in excess of the 99.4% return of the ICE BofA Global High Yield USD Hedged Index.

Fund Positioning

During May, we continued to deploy capital into several new high-yield opportunities as we continue to improve portfolio diversification. The Fund now has almost 50 individual line item investments. New investments spanned sectors including energy, real estate, engineering services, fertilisers, gaming and industrial services. In all cases, we believe the market is materially compensating investors for the underlying credit risk.

Across these investments, we see businesses with resilient cash flows, meaningful hard-asset or enterprise-value backing, improving balance sheets, and management teams focused on reducing leverage. Several also benefit from favourable structural tailwinds, including rising electricity demand, resilient government spending, and stable recurring revenues. In our view, these characteristics provide an attractive margin of safety while offering the potential for capital appreciation as credit spreads normalise.

Consistent with our move to increase portfolio diversification, we funded most of these purchases by trimming larger existing positions, reducing issuer concentration.

The Fund remains positioned towards issuers where we believe downside risk is well protected by asset values, strong cash generation or improving credit fundamentals, while maintaining exposure to securities that continue to offer attractive income and the potential for meaningful spread compression.

As always, our objective is to maximise long-term risk-adjusted returns while minimising the probability of permanent capital impairment.
