FUND LETTER MARCH 2026

In March, the Pentagon High Conviction Bond Fund (the "Fund") fell by 2.72%, versus a return of negative 1.2% for the ICE BofA Global High Yield USD Hedged Index. The ICE BofA Global High Yield USD Hedged Index is a market-value-weighted benchmark composed of below-investment-grade corporate bonds issued in major developed market currencies and hedged in to USD.

Year-to-date, the Fund has returned negative 1.9%, compared to negative 0.2% for the ICE BofA Global High Yield USD Hedged Index.

Since its inception, the Fund has returned 182.3% in total, or 8.2% annually, which is way in excess of the 95.1% return of the ICE BofA Global High Yield USD Hedged Index.

According to Morningstar, the Fund is three-star rated out of 923 Global High-Yield Bond Funds.

Fund Positioning

We added exposure to a global financial technology platform operating across merchant payments, software and consumer financial services. The business generates c.USD 10.4 billion of annual gross profit and c.USD 2.6 billion of operating cash flow, supported by a large and diversified base of merchant and consumer activity. The balance sheet is conservatively positioned, with c.USD 8.0 billion of gross debt against c.USD 6.5 billion of cash and additional liquid investments, implying very low net leverage and substantial liquidity coverage of obligations.

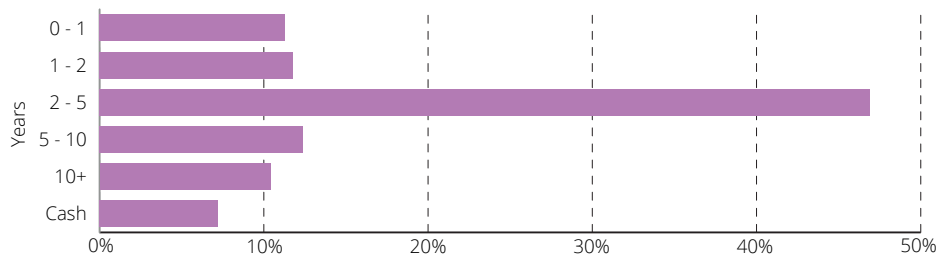

We added exposure to a U.S. electricity and energy services provider operating across retail supply, power generation and grid flexibility solutions. The business generates c.USD 30.7 billion of annual revenue and c.USD 2.9 billion of EBITDA, supported by a diversified platform spanning customer supply, owned generation capacity of c.25GW and demand-response capabilities following a recent large-scale acquisition. The capital structure includes c.USD 16.6 billion of total debt against c.USD 4.7 billion of cash, implying net leverage of c.4.1x, with a clear pathway to deleveraging towards sub-3.0x over the medium term through strong operating cash flow generation and disciplined capital allocation.

The fund remains overweight financials and consumer discretionary.

As always, the Fund continues to invest where we see the most significant returns while minimising the risk of medium-term capital impairment.
